Some reports of injury and death have been reported with unregulated and unlicensed providers, which raises concerns about marijuana. As state legislatures, we have developed a practice and expect our clinics to do the same. We need to highlight that there is no such thing as a safe product. This medicine has been a game changer for many, and since policy changes have happened, we have made cannabis a medical option for our medical care.

For many, medical cannabis is a game changer

RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH

TUESDAY, JANUARY 24, 2023

MEDICINAL MARIJUANA

Free clinics are filling the mental health gap

KELLY TILL, President and Publisher
JAMES WALLACE, Senior Editor

The Virginia Community Health Centers Association (VCHCA) has recently opened a new behavioral health clinic in Richmond, Virginia, filling the mental health wing after another one opened a new behavioral health clinic in Woodbridge, Virginia. It will be the first of many, as the Virginia Community Health Centers Association has announced plans to open additional clinics across the state. The new clinic will provide mental health services to underserved communities in the Richmond area, and will be staffed by licensed mental health professionals.

To submit Letters to the Editor, visit latimesdispatch.com or call (804) 649-6007. Email Opinions@timesdispatch.com • The opinions expressed are those of the writer alone.

The Virginia Community Health Centers Association (VCHCA) has recently opened a new behavioral health clinic in Richmond, Virginia, filling the mental health wing after another one opened a new behavioral health clinic in Woodbridge, Virginia. It will be the first of many, as the Virginia Community Health Centers Association has announced plans to open additional clinics across the state. The new clinic will provide mental health services to underserved communities in the Richmond area, and will be staffed by licensed mental health professionals.

To submit Letters to the Editor, visit latimesdispatch.com or call (804) 649-6007. Email Opinions@timesdispatch.com • The opinions expressed are those of the writer alone.

The Virginia Community Health Centers Association (VCHCA) has recently opened a new behavioral health clinic in Richmond, Virginia, filling the mental health wing after another one opened a new behavioral health clinic in Woodbridge, Virginia. It will be the first of many, as the Virginia Community Health Centers Association has announced plans to open additional clinics across the state. The new clinic will provide mental health services to underserved communities in the Richmond area, and will be staffed by licensed mental health professionals.

To submit Letters to the Editor, visit latimesdispatch.com or call (804) 649-6007. Email Opinions@timesdispatch.com • The opinions expressed are those of the writer alone.

The Virginia Community Health Centers Association (VCHCA) has recently opened a new behavioral health clinic in Richmond, Virginia, filling the mental health wing after another one opened a new behavioral health clinic in Woodbridge, Virginia. It will be the first of many, as the Virginia Community Health Centers Association has announced plans to open additional clinics across the state. The new clinic will provide mental health services to underserved communities in the Richmond area, and will be staffed by licensed mental health professionals.

To submit Letters to the Editor, visit latimesdispatch.com or call (804) 649-6007. Email Opinions@timesdispatch.com • The opinions expressed are those of the writer alone.

The Virginia Community Health Centers Association (VCHCA) has recently opened a new behavioral health clinic in Richmond, Virginia, filling the mental health wing after another one opened a new behavioral health clinic in Woodbridge, Virginia. It will be the first of many, as the Virginia Community Health Centers Association has announced plans to open additional clinics across the state. The new clinic will provide mental health services to underserved communities in the Richmond area, and will be staffed by licensed mental health professionals.

To submit Letters to the Editor, visit latimesdispatch.com or call (804) 649-6007. Email Opinions@timesdispatch.com • The opinions expressed are those of the writer alone.

The Virginia Community Health Centers Association (VCHCA) has recently opened a new behavioral health clinic in Richmond, Virginia, filling the mental health wing after another one opened a new behavioral health clinic in Woodbridge, Virginia. It will be the first of many, as the Virginia Community Health Centers Association has announced plans to open additional clinics across the state. The new clinic will provide mental health services to underserved communities in the Richmond area, and will be staffed by licensed mental health professionals.

To submit Letters to the Editor, visit latimesdispatch.com or call (804) 649-6007. Email Opinions@timesdispatch.com • The opinions expressed are those of the writer alone.